Hi Heather

No problem. Sorry, I should have let you know but controversy and conspiracy theory continues to abound over this one and I didn't think. The latest seem to alternate between plagiarism and whether we can prove it is the same document as handed in 35 years ago.

Just bat them my way if you get any.

Best wishes

Clive

Hi Clive

Just to let you know, we harvested your repository this afternoon and updated our record for this thesis on EThOS; it now links to the digital copy on the LSE Repository.

Thanks Heather

I figured if you had it we would have found it four years ago when we first looked, but thought I'd better check again – many thanks for such a quick reply.

The President's office has promised us a digital copy so fingers crossed!!

Hi Clive

No, we don't hold a copy. The 'DSC' shelfmark is the EThOS ID. I know this looks confusing – it goes back to the days when DSC had a thesis microfilm service – but we never made a microfilm copy of this thesis.

Please do let us know if you make the digital copy available on your repository; our daily stats show there has been a great deal of traffic to this page on EThOS over the last week or so.

Best wishes

Heather

Hi Sue

controversy over the thesis is still rumbling on in Taiwan and President Tsai has decided to make her thesis available online through Taiwan's National Library. I have asked if that means we can also make a copy available but a colleague posted me the following:

http://primocat.bl.uk/F?func=direct&local\_base=ITEMV&doc\_number=017428475&con\_lng=eng

As it shows a DSC number, is it possible that you do have an original copy?

many thanks

Clive
