Do we change the statement to 'Republic of China (Taiwan)'

I don't see there would be much value...and continuing to make amendments will only set people off.

To whom may concern

As a world named institute, your organization should be more careful and responsible on all thesis reference and name you should be use. Currently, Dr Tsai in wen is the President of Republic of China, not president of Taiwan. Taiwan is just an oral use and quick way to introduce ROC but should not be in formal statement like this. To avoid confusion of your organisation political stand (which I believe you do not have) and future problem in between China and ROC. I strongly suggest your organisation correct the statement.
